FINEST RESIDENCE

In Hopkinsville Burns Up In Midnight Fire.

Miss Fannie Morton Suffers Heavy Loss—Family Has Narrow Escape.

The fine dwelling house of Miss Fannie Morton, on West Seventh street, was totally destroyed by fire at midnight Sunday night. The fire was breaking out of the roof when discovered and the fire department could not get to the scene in time to save the building, one of the costliest in the city. Being of wood and newly painted it burned rapidly and was consumed in an incredibly short space of time.

The residence was in a shady lawn, surrounded by ten acres of meadow and was a few years ago rebuilt at a cost of many thousands of dollars. It was furnished regardless of expense, with hardwood finish, plate glass mirrors and every modern convenience. The furniture was equally as costly, the piano alone costing $1,000.

The contents of the house, valued at several thousand dollars, were also a total loss. In addition to the fine piano, $400 in jewelry, $600 in money and the elegant furniture for many rooms went up in smoke. Nothing was gotten out, not even wearing apparel.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Morton, Miss Morton, her two sisters and small nephew, were in the upper rooms. All escaped in their night clothes. Mrs. Morton and the child were brought down on a ladder, having a very close call.

The origin of the fire is not known. The total loss is estimated by Miss Morton at from $15,000 to $18,000. The insurance is $12,000, of which $9,000 is on the house and $3,000 on the furniture. Higgins & Son have $8,000 and Long, Kelly & Sterling $4,000.

The Planters Bank & Trust Co. had a mortgage of $6,000 on the property, with insurance to that amount payable to it.

FRANCHISE SALE

On Next Friday Week Attracting Attention.

Several Up-to-Date Systems Are Looking Into the Matter.

The telephone fight in Chattanooga has ended in a victory for a new franchise. By a vote of 5 to 3 an ordinance was passed to sell a franchise to a company that will compete with the East Tennessee Telephone Company.

The franchise will in all probability be bought by a representative of the Ideal Construction Co., of Lima, O., which company has recently put in a system at Augusta, Ga., and is proposing to put in one in Nashville.

This company uses the instruments of the Automatic Electric Co., of Chicago, which is making the very latest telephones, doing away with the cumbersome and unsatisfactory "hello" exchanges.

The subscriber by an automatic device makes his own connections and only one operator to 1,000 phones is required at the central office to look after the mechanism.

This company is represented in this territory by Mr. E. B. Tyler, of Nashville, who has instructions to put his system in the principal cities of the South.

At present this system is not represented in any Kentucky town, but is in successful operation in many of the larger cities of Ohio and other states.

The Home Telephone Company, which bought the franchise indirectly a year ago, which was afterwards rejected, is in a better position than ever to handle the franchise this year. This system has revolutionized the telephone business of Louisville. It now has 6,500 phones in that city and its elegant new exchange on Fifth street is one of the handsomest buildings in the city. It has invaded the Western Kentucky territory and now has toll lines running to Lafayette in our own county. Its service is far ahead of that given by the Cumberland Telephone Company and what is equally as important, its prices are very much less.

When the franchise is sold on the 23rd inst it will be bought by a company amply able to put in and maintain a strictly first class service. As soon as the franchise is sold and the sale ratified, the Cumberland Telephone Company will have to establish its legal right to operate in Hopkinsville without a franchise.

The subscribers in the county are almost unanimously for a new system and will be among the first to transfer their business to the new company. The agreement the Cumberland is now operating under does not apply to country subscribers, who are piled on the overburdened wires 4 or 5 to a line until it costs the average man his time, his patience and his religion to try to talk over a party line. These lines are not promised any relief, nor is there any disposition to reduce charges.

Some of the sufferers on these lines are preparing to appeal to the Fiscal Court to see if some way to control the country service cannot be devised.

In the meantime the Cumberland has not indicated its purpose to bid on the franchise, though it shows signs of being more or less rattled.

It has moved a part of its business into its new $6,000 building, paid for by the people of Hopkinsville with excess charges. It has also announced through its official organ that it is going to perform wonders in the sweet bye-and-bye, although it has had all these years in which to show all these years its works. All of which brings up the old poem to memory:

"When the devil was sick,
The devil a saint would be,
But when the devil got well,
The devil a saint was he."

This may not be the exact language of this poem, but the reader will, by straining his intellect a little, catch the idea intended to be conveyed.

The Cumberland company is feeding the people on promises and exhibiting signs of repentance until after the 23rd. It had the same sort of a spasm of virtue 14 months ago, but we are still using back number phones. It is true we have exchanged the antiquated hello boxes for long distance phones, but they are still so far behind the times that the Cumberland is promising to take them out. If the Cumberland means business, let it buy a franchise and put itself where its service can be regulated by law and not by "agreements" concocted by its own employees.

We had promises a year ago that were never kept.

We have had new requirements exacted of the people that had to be dropped when the Kentuckian, representing the people, called the Cumberland down and showed that it was getting too gay, even under its own "agreement."

WANTED TO DIE.

Farmer Swallows Large Quantity of Camphor Gum.

Soon Relieved By Physician—Will Be Tried For Lunacy.

William Hancock, a farmer living in the Long Hollow country, a few miles west of Lafayette, attempted suicide last Friday by swallowing half an ounce of camphor gum. A physician was sent for and Hancock was soon relieved by the use of a stomach pump. When asked why he attempted self destruction he is quoted as saying that he was "tired of life and wanted to die."

He had been in very bad health for some time and it is thought that his mind has become unbalanced. He lives just over the line in Trigg and was taken to Cadiz yesterday, where he will be tried for lunacy.

JUDGE PHELPS.

Now Holding Circuit Court Vice Judge Campbell.

The blunder made by Gov. Beckham in the appointment of a circuit judge for this county two weeks ago has been rectified as far as possible by the appointment of Judge John Phelps for the rest of the term.

Judge Jas. Campbell, of Paducah, who was first appointed, in addition to being an able judge it is a very sensible man and it did not take him long to see the break the Governor had made on the advice of his unwise local advisers. I decided in view of pressing business at home, to vacate the bench and open the way to correct the mistake made in snubbing Judge Bush and his friends. The local lawyers, nearly all of whom supported Judge Bush, learning of Judge Campbell's purpose, circulated a petition asking for the appointment of Judge John Phelps, which Judge Campbell himself signed. This was sent to the Governor at Elkhart and Judge Phelps was appointed Friday and is now on the bench. Judge Campbell returned to Paducah Saturday. The Kentuckian gives the Governor credit for doing a very sensible thing in appointing Judge Phelps. In addition to the reasons heretofore given Judge Phelps is well qualified for the place, has had considerable experience and is popular with the members of the bar. If he had been appointed at first, the Governor would not have subjected himself to criticism.

The October American Boy.

Football plays a prominent part in the October American Boy. The front cover shows two strong American boys in action on the football field and makes a striking picture. "Football at Yale" and a football story, "A Bit of Red Ribbon" will interest lovers of the game. Surely no month for a boy's mental feast could be more attractive than that spread out in the 32 pages of the paper before us, and the good thing about it is that there is not a word of it all but will prove helpful to the boys. Boys ought to appreciate things such as a splendid publication to represent them in the American Boy. The illustrated stories are especially strong. Leading illustrated articles dealing with boy life include United States Senate Pages; Unlabeled Friends; How the President Kept in Touch With the World; A Boy in the Hall of Fame; William Pitt; The Boys of the White House; and The Freedom of Boys.

Dr. Ransford vs. Dr. Abbott.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, in his rec. at article against rural rights, for women, claims that women ought not to vote, because the main function of government is "protection of person, property and reputation," and women are not qualified to furnish protection. Dr. William S. Ransford says:

"Whether we greet it with dismay or hopefulness, one of the results of our civilization is that legislation is entering spheres which are popularly woman's. Once upon a time legislation chiefly had to do with protection of property. Now, points that we do not dream of legislating about are so dealt with, as a matter of course, we legislate about homes, sanitary questions, education, restriction of labor to capital, licensing questions—all moral questions these, questions that in the most intimate way affect the home as well as the outside interests of life, and questions on which woman is not only a judge, but decidedly the best judge. It is most unreasonable and unfair that in these questions where experience is vital, and all other tenderest interests are immediately affected, her influence should be confined to an indirect influence, and her vote, if recorded at all, only recorded through pressure on her husband or her sons."

While opening a box, J. C. Mount, of Three Mile Run, N. Y., said: "I thought of you when I saw this. I thought of all the pain and soreness this would cause me," he says, "and immediately applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and occasionally afterwards. To my surprise it removed all pain and soreness and the injured parts were soon healed." For sale by C. K. Wyly.

Chrysanthemum Fair.

November 11, 12 and 13 has been set as the date for our great Chrysanthemum Fair. At a meeting of the school Board a superintendent was elected and committees appointed. These will get to work to make this fair the greatest of its kind in Kentucky. The Garrett & Jameson factory has been secured, which will furnish ample room for the display of the fine collection of plants which is already in sight. The cooperation of the entire community is solicited to help make this the best flower show ever held in Kentucky. A full list of officers and committees will appear in The Journal next week—Pembroke Journal.

Groom Gets Ready to Hunt.

He wore a frightened and embarrassed look as he slowly entered the office of the county clerk yesterday. Standing in the centre of the main office, the stranger gazed about him in awe. He seemed to be looking for somebody, and frequently he stroked his newly-trimmed mustache. Crowds of sportsmen were pushing their way into an inner office, where Clerk Anderson was busy making out license for those who wished to hunt game within the state of Illinois. Mechanically the stranger followed the sportsmen. He heard them speaking of license game, and other things. He took a position in the line, and finally reached the desk where Anderson presided.

"Your name?" asked the clerk.

It was given, also the address and the stranger's age.

"Expect any big catches this time?" asked the clerk with a smile.

"Oh, I've caught it already," came the solemn reply.

The stranger paid the clerk $1.45 and slowly moved away. Reaching the door, he stopped, scratching his head, and then returned to the desk.

"I suppose everything is all right," said the clerk, "but don't you want her name, too?" The stranger wanted a marriage license.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deeds—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who contribute to the good of the community. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold, and there is no danger of a fever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by C. K. Wyly, druggist.

THE PENSION ROLL.

There Are Now 996,545 Pensioners

Averaging $133 Per Annum

The annual report of the Commissioner of Pensions shows that there are now on the roll 996,545 pensioners. The average amount of each pension is $133. The annual amount of the Spanish war pension roll has reached $1,765,310. In 1860, the pensions, in round numbers, cost $28,000,000, and the interest on this public debt $130,000,000. In 1903 the pensions cost $37,000,000 and interest on the debt $27,000,000. Thus, while the interest charged decreased $103,000,000, pensions increased $19,000,000. The two cost $56,000,000 more in 1903 than in 1860. Commissioner We think that the high tide in pensions has been reached and passed.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grip; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by C. W. Wyly, druggist.

Chicken With Three Legs.

Sound Advice.

In its crop report for August, recently issued, the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture includes an article on "The Management of Poultry on small Farms," by John H. Robinson, editor of the Farm Poultry. This report may be obtained by applying to J. Ellsworth, secretary of the board, State House, Boston, and those wishing to receive these bulletins regular may have their names placed on the mailing list for that purpose.

In this article Mr. Robinson says: A large farm offers the best opportunity to keep poultry with little labor and comparatively large profits, but the owner of the large farm is not often much interested in poultry. It is the small farmers, under the necessity of making the most of every opportunity to make money on their land, who are attracted by the possibilities of poultry culture. A very large proportion of the small New England farms are of such dimensions and proportions that the fowls cannot be given range. Because of this, many small farmers interested in poultry have adopted the intensive methods which small poultry keepers in towns often find necessary, but which large poultry keepers and farmers ought to avoid. Intensive methods make the care of poultry a grind and drudgery, so that the poultry keeper's time is almost fully occupied in caring for a few fowls. Many farmers who follow the intensive system and find it profitable for a time have neglected other lines of farm work, while others, unwilling to do this have reluctantly given up their intention of increasing their stock of fowls. The best solution of the problem of the small farmer who wants to keep a few hundred hens, and still give most of his time to other things, will be found in the adoption of methods intermediate between the intensive methods of the town poultry keeper and the free range methods that work well on large farms.

Mr. Robinson then goes on to say that for more than a decade the interest of poultry keepers has been almost monopolized by intensive methods, which are necessary to secure high averages of egg production. These large egg yields are often secured at such cost of care and food that the actual profit per fowl figures small. By the colony system the owner of a large farm will distribute his fowls over the farm, and, giving them room and range, relieve himself of the necessity of doing for them many of the things which the intensive poultry keeper must do daily. Then follows an extended illustration of the difference between the two methods, particularly as relates to supplying green food, meat food and exercise.

What we are seeking, says Mr. Robinson, is a method by which the farmer can keep as much poultry as possible without giving it the detailed attention that must be given when the land occupied is stocked to the limit. The problem is neither a deep nor a difficult one. As the farmer who cannot give his poultry range must have yards the obvious thing for him to do is to lay out his yards according to the size of his flocks, limit the total of fowls kept to the capacity of the yards, make a house of such dimensions as are required, and place them singly or in pairs where they can be most readily reached in making the rounds of the place. He then gives details as to the size of houses and yards required under this method, and points out that the expense of fencing is limited to the increased cost for the end fences, no more fencing being required for the division and side fences than when a continuous connecting house with narrow yards is used. He further explains the best methods of regulating the work of feeding, watering, etc., so that fowls may be kept in good condition and the greater part of the day still left free for regular farm work.

In closing Mr. Robinson says: Poultry keeping ought to be an important feature on every farm, and a pleasant feature of farm work. It may be if the farmer will only study to adapt his stock and his methods to the capacity of the farm under conditions satisfactory to him.

Why I Raise Buff Leghorns.

Like breeders of other strains of poultry I am frequently asked why I raise Buff Leghorns, and will proceed to make a general and intelligent answer, as briefly as possible.

I have bred poultry more or less extensively for twenty years, and in that time have experimented with my breeds, always having in view the variety that would earn the most cash. I have bred about all the poultry breeds, and have given them all possible chance incident to poultry breeding. About five years ago the Buff Leghorn came to my notice and I started a pen against the advice of friend and many prominent breeders. They were a new variety, and I liked their looks; they had a business air I had never observed about any other fowl. Their good qualities soon began to make themselves manifest, and I began to drop out the other breeds, and last spring I discarded my last pen of Barred Rocks, the last of the old has-beens to go.

The Buff Leghorn is a beautiful fowl, and as an egg producer their equal does not exist upon the face of mother earth; as a broiler I have never seen their equal for quality, and they are as much meat at twelve to fourteen weeks as the larger varieties. They dress much easier and nicer than other fowls, have a fine, rich yellow skin and legs. Early pullets commence laying as early as four months and ten days of age; they are the only absolutely perfect non-sitters. The incubator must do the hatching, or else some of the old-fashioned biddies. They have earned more money for me by half than any breed of fowls I ever raised, and I find it impossible to supply the demand for them, and I think it no vain prediction to say that they are the coming fowl; everything points toward it.

To the man who takes no care of his chickens, lets them roost any and everywhere, lay and sit the same way, they are not for him. But the man who houses comfortably, devotes a little care, and makes poultry a part of his business, will find the Buff Leghorn to be a fowl that will not only pay for his keep, but put a handsome balance on the right column of his ledger.

Now, one word to all breeders of Buff Leghorns who are not members of the Buff Leghorn Club. Join the club. It is for your benefit. It costs $1 to join, and a fee of $1 a year for dues. I think it shall prove my article. Success to all.

OLD WATCH COCKS.

Present Day Use Is Almost Entirely for Ornament.

"They'll be after the heels of my old boots next," plaintively said a dealer in old watches, after he had parted with as many as 30 excellent samples of cocks at the minimum price of six cents apiece, according to the Washington Star. The woman who bought them was of fashionable reputation, and afterward described the incident as "the raid of her life."

In the craze which now exists for old watch cocks and the making of them into such ornaments as girldes, chains, bangles and scarf pins, the proverbial cleverness of Dame Fashion is verified. There is much originality in the fad. From bits of discarded mechanisms hitherto regarded as useless, quaint and semi-barbaric pieces of decorative jewelry have been made.

The so-called cock of a watch is the round, flat and usually filigree piece of metal which was used to shield the mainspring of ancient watches—those which went out with the advent of the more convenient stemwinder. It usually held the largest jewel which the works boasted, and its claim to beauty rested solely on the peculiarity of its design.

From watches long since laid away with other relics of departed ancestors these cocks are now being taken. As, however, even the most lucky inheritors would hardly possess a sufficiently large number of them to form a girldes, long chain or even a bangle, the search is often continued through some watchmaker's drawer of discarded things.

The fad is not confined to women. But only the larger jeweled cocks are desired by men who appreciate their uniqueness and know they may easily be made into artistic scarfpins.

In fastening the cocks together for chains or bangles small metal rings are used. It is customary to have the whole ornament regilded or dipped in silver, according to the taste of the wearer. Only those with money to burn make a point of having them washed with gold.

DRESS AND DISCOMFORT.

Men Sweater and Sweat, But Make Little or No Change.

Not the least of the drawbacks of civilization is the character of clothing that civilized convention requires the man person to wear during the summer months. Wo mankind usually dresses somewhat sensibly, but even she finds stays and like abominations a great burden in midsummer. One never heard of savages suffering from heat prostration, nor do we get reports from country boys being similarly affected.

Man, particularly if he be over 30, is disposed to be ultra-conservative in the matter of clothing. He likes to wear one suit of clothing four or five months, and then put on another and wear it a similar length of time, and so on. When the months come he may make the concession of leaving off his waistcoat, but that is usually as far as he goes for street wear. He will wear a somewhat lighter suit of underwear in the summer than in the winter, but this and the divested waistcoat are practically the only differentiations made in the character of clothing that is expected to serve for the chill months of spring and the roasting days of midsummer. Stiff linen collars, heavy linen cuffs, a coat and not infrequently a stiff hat, are clung to like grim death for the most ordinary street wear, while if the occasion be any sort of function men are as likely as not to wear heavy frock coats, waistcoats and a whole raft of unnecessary clothing.

When the "short waist" fad came in a few years ago it looked for a time as if men might give up the foolishness of coats in midsummer, but the few who were bold enough to leave them off were laughed at, and whether it was the fear of ridicule or the lack of pockets that determined the question, the uncomfortable fact remains that custom very shortly returned to the decrees that no man must appear in public without a coat. And then he goes on sweating and sweating at the weather.

Recent letters from R. C. Morefield, Hopkinsville, tell of a case. No delay about Doan's Kidney Pills. They do their work quickly and well. Here's the local proof of it.

R. C. Morefield, Sr., real estate dealer and associated with the Christian County Title Co., residing at 222 W. 17th St., says: "For several years the condition of my back and of the kidney secretions furnished ample evidence that I was suffering from kidney disorders. The aching in my back would come on by spells often so severe that it was painful for me to stoop, to straighten up or to attempt any sudden movement. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised locally and thinking that they might help me, got a box at Thomas & Traher's drug store. I had used them only a few days when I noticed a marked improvement in my condition and I continued the treatment. It did me more good than any medicine I had ever used, and that is putting it mildly. You may publish my statement at any time and I will do all I can to let the value of Doan's Kidney Pills be known."

A POET TURNED BEGGAR.

Strange Story of Germain Nouveau—Now Thinks Poetry Sinful.

Standing at the door of the mansion belonging to the Society of Men of Letters the other morning, says a Paris letter to the London Daily Telegraph, was a broken-down beggar clad in rags and apparently half starved. The footman told him to go away, but he pleaded so piteously to see the president of the society that he was at last admitted to the hall. The president came down, and the beggar said in a whisper: "I am Germain Nouveau." The name is that of a poet who many years ago gave promise of great talent, even of genius, but suddenly disappeared, and had since remained undiscoverable.

The beggar was really Germain Nouveau. His history is an extraordinary one. Formerly a clerk in the government office of public instruction, he published a few poems which were of considerable worth, and which attracted the attention of all literary people. Well known writers took him up and encouraged him in his work. Many critics considered that he boded fair to become the foremost poet of his time. One day he suddenly came to the conclusion that poetry was sinful, and that the only holy life was total renunciation. He threw all his manuscripts, containing, it is said, much remarkable work, into the fire, resigned his clerkship and disappeared. He was not heard of afterward until the other day.

It seems that he lived up to his convictions and became a street beggar. Clad in rags, he sat for years all day by the porch of Aix cathedral, and asked for alms, subsisting only on the few pennies which people going to church bestowed on him. Late he took to apostrophizing persons whose demeanor he did not consider sufficiently devout, and one day he violently upbraided a lady because he thought her dress was not plain enough to be worn in church. After that he was no longer allowed to beg by the cathedral door, so he then started to walk to Paris. With the aid of a small grant made him by the Society of Men of Letters he has now taken up his abode in the Quartier Mouffetard, the mendicants' neighborhood, and lives among the beggars, happy to be in their midst and to be one of them.

ELECTRIC FARMS.

Germany in the Van in Introduction of Modern Methods.

In the application of electricity to everyday work, says London Answers, Germany has perhaps gone farther than any other nation. Electrically heated and operated cooking and laundry apparatus is in common use there, but the most striking single development is the electrical farm.

Take, for example, the Quendau farm, which covers 450 acres, and its dairy handles 1,000 gallons of milk daily. Every part of this farm is lighted by electricity, and is in telephone communication with every other part. The dairy has an electrical churn; the barn contains electrically operated feed and carrot cutting machines, and even the grindstone is turned by a small belt from the shaft connected with the barn motor.

The water-pumping apparatus is run by electricity; all the buildings are lighted by incandescent lamps, and there is an electrical indicator at the doors of all the houses. This farm has also its own threshing and grist mill, the machinery of which is turned by a current from the miniature central station; and finally there is a small sawmill which gets its power from the same station. On the farm there are all kinds of electrical agricultural machines.

The power for all these various operations—lighting, heating, telephones, churning, cutting, grinding, pumping, threshing and sawing—comes from a 50-horse-power stationary engine working two dynamos. From this station power is distributed to all parts of the farm, and the switchboard is so plainly marked that the ordinary farm hand can regulate the supply to fit the need.

TALKING WITH FLAGS.

How the Signal Corps Plays Part in Modern Warfare.

The signal corps plays a very important part in modern warfare—so important that army and navy officers say they could not possibly do without it, in spite of the fact that the great campaigns were carried on and great battles were fought before it was ever dreamed of.

There are several systems of signaling in use by the army and navy, the simplest of which is that commonly called "wigwagging," a term that was invented for it. Nearly everyone knows, perhaps, that the signaling is done by means of small flags, but a brief description of how the flags are handled to convey a message, says the New York Herald, will not be without interest.

The system is an adaptation of the Morse dot and dash telegraph alphabet, the different movements of a flag taking the place of the dots and dashes. By the Morse alphabet the letter A is represented by a dot and a dash, the B by a dash and three dots, and the letter C by two dots, a space and a dot. The other letters are represented in a similar way.

In the army system waving the flag to the right means a dot; to the left a dash, and dropping it directly in front of the operator means a space. If, therefore, the operator waves the flag once to the right and once to the left he makes the letter A; if he waves it once to the left and three times to the right he makes the letter B, and if he waves it twice to the right, once down in front and then once again to the right he makes the letter C.

This reads like slow work, but it is anything but slow, for the operators are so skillful and quick in the use of the flag that they can give and receive the letters at almost as fast as a telegraph operator can give and receive the clicks of his instrument.

The use of a strong field glass enables the receiving operator to read the signals at a great distance. When it is necessary to signal at night a torch is substituted for the flag.

Wigwagging in the navy is done on the same general principle, but the numerals 1, 2, 3 are used instead of dots and dashes. The letter A by this system is made by the numerals 1, 2; the letter B by 2, 2, 1, 2; the letter C by 1, 2, 1; the letter D by 2, 2, and so on.

Waving the flag to the right means 1, to the left means 2, and down the front means 3. Two waves to the left, therefore, make the letter A; two waves to the left, one to the right and one again to the left make the letter B; one wave to the right, one to the left and one again to the right make C; three waves to the left make D, and so on.

The navy also uses a flashlight and the steam whistle in combination with the numerals. A short flash or a short blast of the whistle means 1; two short flashes or two short blasts mean 2, and a long flash or a long blast means 3.

Provision is thus made for signaling by day, whether the air be clear or foggy.

Historic Tragedies

WHEN JOHNSON WAS IN HOPKINSVILLE 39 YEARS AGO.

Execution of Lieut. Col. Jas. F. Brewer—Killing of Col. T. G. Woodward—Court House Burned.

(The following historical sketch by the editor of THE KENTUCKIAN is reprinted, with some additions, from the Courier-Journal of October 4, 1903. It will run through several issues until completed.)

PART II:

Capt. Jas. F. Brewer's commission promoting him to Lieutenant Colonel was taken from his pocket when he was captured, though he was better known as Capt. Brewer.

The facts leading up to his capture in Trigg county and his brutal execution by Col. Johnson, are obtained from eye witnesses, some of whom were themselves participart in the stirring events of forty years ago.

At college Brewer developed a fondness for ladies' society and a dislike of school-room confinement. He did not finish the course, but dropped out after one or two years. As a student, he was not inclined to be disorderly, but was rather a leader among the "hale fellows."

At school he early established a reputation for courage that remained with him to the end of his brief and stormy life. He had but one difficulty and that narrowly college was peaceful and uneventful.

After leaving school, Brewer fell desperately in love with a young lady who had also another suitor. In his jealousy, he challenged his rival to fight a duel, but the favored lover refused to fight, married the girl and went to Europe. Brewer followed them to Europe and while he attempted no violence, his presence everywhere the couple went was a source of constant and uneasy concern to the groom, destroying much of the pleasure of his honeymoon.

Later Brewer studied law and graduating at Lebanon, Tenn., located in Nashville, Tenn. In 1860, after returning from Europe, he came to Hopkinsville and made a speech for the Democratic ticket at the court-house. Men are now living who heard his address, which was a bold and impassioned plea for secession, as the only remedy for the ills of the Southern states.

When the war came on the following year, his love of adventure carried him early into the Southern army, and his career, extending over nearly four years, was characterized by many deeds of desperate and reckless bravery.

Early in the war he was captured and taken prisoner to Fort Delaware, but escaped by swimming the Delaware Bay, a most remarkable feat. He made his way to Richmond, traveling with Union soldiers disguised as a sailor. Reaching his home at last, for a while he was in hiding in a cave near his father's mill, which mill is still standing on Little River. It is now owned by W. C. & W. Bins. Mary Brewer, a colored woman now living in this city, was the trusted family servant who carried his meals to him, until he finally found an opportunity to re-enter the army. Towards the last years of the war, his service was somewhat irregular, but he was never guilty of any act of war as much a violation of the rules of warfare as was his own murder.

Col. Thos. G. Woodward Killed.

Col. Tom Woodward, who was himself a few weeks later shot and killed in the streets of Hopkinsville, by home guards, was scouting in this part of Kentucky in the fall of 1864. Brewer was at that time a captain in his command. Col. Woodward, while under the influence of drink, made a dash into the city. His command halted at the corner of Main and Fifteenth streets, refusing to follow. One man rode with Woodward, endeavoring to dissuade him from the foolhardy undertaking, as Union soldiers and home guards filled the windows along Main street, in anticipation of an attack. Woodward rode slowly down the street, pistol in hand, and when he reached the Ninth street crossing he was commanded to "halt." He was in the act of raising his pistol to a window occupied by Peyton Breathitt, a home guard, when he was fired up on from both sides of the street. One bullet struck his horse in the neck and four entered the body of the rider. The horse sank to the ground and Woodward was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried into the hotel office and laid upon the floor, where he expired in a few moments, without regaining consciousness. The soldier who killed him escaped out the street by which they had come. The Confederates on the hill fired a volley down Main street and disappeared. A small sugar maple tree had just been planted in the street in front of Dr. W. H. Hopson's residence.

A bullet cut out the top of this little tree. The tree is still living, and the fork made when it grew out is plainly shown. Some of the shots that killed Woodward were fired from the building where the First National Bank now stands and others from the upper rooms of the Phoenix Hotel. He was shot by two market balls and two rifle balls. A policeman named Paul Fuller claimed the credit of killing Woodward. There are men now living in Hopkinsville who could have claimed equal credit, but Fuller's honors remained undisputed. He was a few years later himself killed in a shooting affray almost on the spot where Woodward fell.

Col. Woodward was a native of a New England State, probably Vermont. He was small of stature and wore his hair in flowing locks that came down on his shoulders. He was a graduate of West Point and highly educated. Leaving the army, he came to Kentucky about 1848 and taught school for ten or twelve years at various points in Christian county. He was teaching at the Brick Church, near Sinking Fork, when the war came on and was one of the first volunteers to tender his services to the Confederacy.

In 1862 according to Perrin's History of Christian county, he made a dash into Clarksville, and with 300 men surrounded Col. Mason's superior force. Mason was camped in the college building and Woodward trained upon it a mock battery of artillery, made of logs mounted on wheels, which caused Mason to surrender unconditionally. When he was brought into Col. Woodward's presence, and saw the little man with his long, unkempt auburn hair, his drooping mustache, his face as dark as a Spaniard's and his boots coming up to his knees, he laughingly challenged Woodward to go across the street with him and sit for a picture, saying "I want to send it North to show my friends what a d-d insignificant little cuss I surrendered to." Woodward had his picture taken and presented Col. Mason with a copy. The picture used in this sketch was made from an old daguerrotype, probably a copy of the one taken for the Federal officer.

Heroes Returned.

Worn out with the hardships of warfare, the "survivors" of the army of West Point, belonging to company D, returned home Saturday night. All who left Hopkinsville survived the fierce conflicts that raged for ten days. Their military ardor was in a measure kept cool by an almost constant downpour of rain and much of the marching and fighting was in mud a foot deep.

The Third Kentucky was in the thick of the last engagement and captured the colors of an Indiana regiment. The Kentuckians belonged to the "Blues" who came out victorious. With the local soldiers came Col. Henry, Maj. Bassett and Adj. Tandy. The pay car arrived Friday and all were paid off. The privates were paid at the rate of $18.50 a month and the officers received from $4 to $8 a day.

The boys all claim to have had a fine time, but there is a well-grounded suspicion that they have had enough for a while at least.

FISCAL COURT.

Long List of Claims Allowed—Other Business.

Fiscal Court adjourned Saturday, after having been in session all week. All of the magistrates were in attendance and the body was presided over by County Judge W. T. Fowler. A large number of claims were allowed and the reports of various committees were filed. Eighty-one railroad bonds and 150 turnpike bonds were returned.

D. T. Cranor, S. G. Buckner and W. R. Wicks were appointed a committee to investigate and report the amount of money expended from April 1 to Oct. 1 for road and bridge purposes.

It was decided that hereafter all claims against the county over a year old shall be barred by limitation. Claims must be filed five days before the convening of court.

pants in the stirring events of forty years ago.

It is proper to take more than a passing glance at Capt. Brewer. He was born about 1836 and was about twenty-eight years of age at the time of his execution. As a boy, he was noted for his daring spirit and as a young man was distinguished for his love of dress and neatness of attire. In 1856, or thereabouts, his father sent him to Centre College at Danville, Ky., and he was there for a year or two escaped a tragic ending. A student in the senior class, afterwards distinguished in war and peace and still living, on one occasion aroused his anger, and in the twinkling of an eye Brewer seized the young man by the lapel of his coat with his left hand and pulled out a murderous-looking knife with his right. His adversary, by a quick motion, pulled off his coat and darted away, leaving Brewer with the coat in his hand and blood in his eye. There was talk among the seniors

at a time when many future statesmen and distinguished men were his fellow student. Among them may be mentioned J. C. S. Blackburn and James B. McCreary, the present United States Senators from Kentucky; John Young Brown, former Governor of Kentucky; T. T. Henderson, former Governor of Missouri; Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, ex-Congressman Phillips, of Missouri; the late Col. Thomas M. Green, and the Rev. J. C. Tate, a distinguished Presbyterian divine of Clarksville, Tenn.

Corn Cobs

Worth $9 a Ton.

Corn cobs, which are now thrown away by the majority of farmers, are worth as much per ton for fuel as hard coal. Few people attempt to burn cobs in the ordinary stove, as they contain so much gas and burn so rapidly that they will not keep fire for any length of time. When burned in Cole's Original Hot Blast Stove, however, this light, trashy fuel is perfectly controlled and fire kept over night. Buy one of these stoves and save your cobs. It will prove a profitable investment. Sold by
